What's new:

As the seasons turn, one fairy tale about a fiery showman, snow-white father Frost and his devoted Ukrainian daughter Nastya continues to enchant an audience around the world. Ivan Levandovsky has captured the attention of the world with his performance of the 19th-century Russian fairytale, “The Snow Maiden.” Having followed Ivan Levandovsky from Moscow to London, Greece and Spain as he revisits the role of Father Frost, The Art of Times and Places caught up with him in Los Angeles, where he performs in the film “Snow White and the Huntsman” alongside Kristen Stewart, and showed the reporter a glimpse of his past. And after three years I felt that Germany is the perfect place, so we did it there and was a big success.” What was the real audience reaction in Germany? “In Germany, the audience was very enthusiastic. They asked me, 'Oh my God, what came from you? Is that a Polish face? A Russian one? American one? And the response was: 'Yes, yes and yes!' They started to talk to me in Russian and in Polish, and were very impressed by the mixture of different cultural faces — from Poland, from Hungary and from Russia in one.” When and how did you decide to revisit this story? “Ivan Nastasevich, an actor — with a fiery Russian voice, a Russian face and a big beard — never played the role of Father Frost. So I suggested him to play the title. In the nineteenth century when the story was told in Russia, he was an amazing character that was so
