"It's good to be an adventurer, there's no doubt about it. It was life just waiting to be lived again. If there was such a thing as adulthood, it must be something like this. To be able to do as you please and meet other people along the way. My older sister was an adventurer like me. She's been gone these many years." "Kinda reminds me of a rogue-like RPG, but more like a simulation game. No pressure." "What an amazing world. I'd really like to go there someday. So addictive!" "The game is very fun and the atmosphere high. I'm already hooked." "Creates an extraordinary sense of adventure. The world of the Lands Between and its strange creatures are created marvelously." "I think it's a game that immediately pulls you in. The animation is gorgeous. The game is full of dungeons and your attack power increases the more you play. I'm looking forward to seeing what direction it continues to go in." "I can't say that I was really able to get myself fully immersed in the game, but I really liked it. I expected that from the outset. The story was fun and the atmosphere was great, and I had a feeling that it wouldn't be able to really blow me away. But when I first dove in, I was amazed by everything that they'd done. I was very happy." "It was fun, with lots of action. Lots of characters and an excellent plot." "The game's atmosphere is that of a classic RPG. So, it makes me think of the classic RPG genre." "I couldn't get myself to play a lot. The game's appearance is neat, but I wasn't able to get myself to play through it all." "It's a fun game to play around with a friend and get on with things." "This game is certainly very enjoyable. Stevenson found

I'm adding some JS functionality to a page that displays a slideshow of images from a database. It works fine as long as I put the tag at the bottom of the page, like so: However, when I place it elsewhere, like this: It doesn't work as it did before. Shouldn't the tag be able to access the variables declared in the tag? A: should be placed before . If you want to make it able to access those variables, try placing tag at the end of the tag. The case of American Eve - allair ====== jsolson >While many of the sentences handed down at juvenile detention centers are encouraging in their brevity, they typically add up to a decade of solitary confinement. This isn't a new topic for HN, but as it's part of the comparison, I'll say I'm curious what the Bay Area's experience with the north tower is like. Of the large juvenile detention centers I've visited, there's a lot of resources and attention devoted to improving the conditions for youth and reducing recidivism. As far as I know, public money isn't used to directly affect the housing conditions of any of these facilities. I'm sure in no case would it be preferable to "solitary confinement". ~~~ jarek The HN topic, as others have noted, is the preponderance of 15-year-olds serving sentences in adult institutions because they didn't get convicted of adult crimes. I think it's safe to say that incarcerating kids in adult prisons (and jails) isn't a serious problem. ~~~ old-gre
