This is the first major update to the FIFA franchise since 2014, and it includes seven features that set the standard for the FIFA Ultimate Team series. New Features in FIFA 22: UMA Improvements The UMA mode in FIFA 21 experienced some major problems, including suspensions and players that were still learning how to use the feature correctly.

These problems were addressed in FIFA 22 with the introduction of new UMA technology. Players use either a keyboard or the gamepad to select a player, then indicate when and how they want to use UMA. These new controls have been developed specifically to work with the UMA mode, making it more accessible to more players.

Improved AI and Team Behaviors The AI can now react to tactical set pieces and return-pass tactics.

They can also pass the ball into multiple players on the defensive line and control defensively during a buildup. The four primary AI personalities in FIFA 22 have been refined with behavior profiles that change based on the game speed and your experience level. The behavior profile can be manually adjusted on the player information screen, and some behaviors are viewable in the “What’s My Playstyle” screen in the game menu. Each team can now have up to three distinct AI personalities, with further customizations available in the options menu. AI personalities can be switched during matches, based on the opposition’s playstyle, and it’s now possible to switch a team’s AI personality to completely replace the default UMA personality. Team Intelligence Players now have more individual control over who runs the team. They have an option to assign players to specific positions or roles in the game. Players can be rewarded with the appropriate badges for being proactive on the ball, such as moving forward in possession or releasing set-piece goals. You can now manage player transfers based on your club’s preferred style of play. Additionally, you can manage a squad's youth development, adjusting where and when they start playing. New Tactics Tactics have been improved in FIFA 22. All types of set-piece goals now count for an improved shot-touch rating, and it's now possible to raise the priority of a player on an out-of-the-back run, to ensure the players run the furthest forward and attack the goal first. It's now possible

Fifa 22 Features Key:

- True free kicks - Ever found yourself owning the ball on the halfway line while pretending to play a regular free kick? In FIFA 22, the conditions and angles of free kicks are simulated and greatly improve your chances of scoring, just as real footballers are able to do.
- True penalty kicks - Penalty kicks are the hardest decision a goalkeeper can have to make. In FIFA 22, the goalkeeper will make a similar decision again and again whilst the player scores. Goalkeepers will also realize the impact losing could have on a match, just as a genuine goalkeeper would.
- More authentic defensive transitions - FIFA's defensive transitions have been improved to be more authentic and lifelike, allowing a player to quickly change and play the ball behind the lines.
- New defensive tackling system - Dynamic, reactive tackling physics will allow players to be successful taking on defenders and winning the ball back. Defenders will also learn to anticipate your passes and will reward ambitious pressing, just as real footballers do.
- Million-dollar moves - Prozone / PSSI - The vision, preparation and decision-making that goes into putting a move into practice is brought to life in a way that mimics the actions of real footballers. Players will communicate
