Borut, we cannot get any id of the Server. And I am getting after passing all the code needed. It should be like like this: OK-43845450-94423651-0-0-1-0110330815892BORUTU3B12 A: You have mixed up some lines: You are reading info from the file that has wrong encoding (that's what the error message says: "Invalid encoding"). And don't forget the line that tells that the data itself is in UTF-16 encoded unicode. The command should be `codecs.open(file_path, 'rb', None, "utf-16")` or `codecs.open(file_path, 'r', 'utf-16')` Also remove the line where you open the file again. Q: Is there a good explanation of the notion of commutativity in Tarski's definition of a complete theory? I have read three places that try to explain the notion of commutativity in Tarski's definition of a complete theory: In Enderton's Abstract elementary mathematics - The basic introduction 3rd edition - page 91 An axiom system whose conclusion is closed under the rules of substitution is called commutative. In Kunen's Set theory Vol. I - page 70 Tarski's axiomatisation of number theory is said to be commutative. In Feferman's Intuitionism, model theory, and reverse mathematics - page 219 In Tarski's axiomatisation, the language of the theory (including the numerals) may be arbitrary. It seems that in all these explanations, Tarski is assumed to be a naive formalist (this is the feeling I get from the first two and the third reference, respectively). However, this leads me to the following question: Is there a formalist explanation of the notion of commutativity that is not based on naive formalism? A: The point is that under the presupposition of naive formalism, a formal system is described in terms of its syntax only. There is no relation of equality between formal elements: for example, between a symbol and the expression obtained from substituting it in a formula. The definition does not presuppose this, but actually requires it: the e79caf774b

d => [16.. 20], e => [21.. 25], f => [26.. 30],); say "@array \@expect"; to something like this: use v6; my @array = ; my @expect = (a => [1.. 5], b => [6.. 10], c => [11.. 15], d => [16.. 20], e => [21.. 25], f => [26.. 30],); my @converted = map{ $array -> [$_] } map +(1, @expect); say "@converted"; but it outputs the following error message: Compilation Error ('Parse error: End of file found before closing bracket at ./perl6.scm:18.') I know the error message means I have a syntax error, but I don't see it. If I try changing the line with say "@expect" to say "@expect" I get this error message: Use of uninitialized value in concatenation (.) or string at ./perl6.scm:15.
