Reviewed on: PlayStation 3 At last, a game that feels like flying. Dan Whitehead Super Pilot makes the fantasy of flying in the sky a reality. There's even a shot of your Helix taking off, circling to get a taste of the rush before eventually blasting off into the stratosphere. Also, this is a racing game. Starring cross-eyed, bespectacled racers Danny Masterson and Kevin James as pilots, race number one is available now from PlayStation Store, with a sequel, with a third, fourth, and possibly fifth eventually on the way. Right now, we're doing laps at a time. But that's not to say Super Pilot, from cleverly-named indie studio Twisted Pixel, is trying to ape other games. Its creators want players to experience the game like they're an Air-Brit in the early '90s, just really fast, with their pilots strapped to pogo sticks. "We hope people will go into the game and feel like they're just experiencing it for the first time," Twisted Pixel creative director Chris House told me, walking me through the game. "Your pilots are flying up to 80 mph, so it's not really a comparison to our game Flatout, where you're doing sixty." "It's really the most disorienting sensation in the world," House continued, explaining that the game's freewheeling speed and airy atmosphere reflect the feeling of being a normal person flying into the sky. "The game is just about having that feeling of being up in the sky, seeing the world, seeing the passing cars, the street lights, and feeling like it's just you. It's about that feeling that you're flying." "We have the first generation of really good graphics on a game like this," he added. "The freeways have intersections, you can see the parallel parking, we have the matching billboards, the sidewalk, all this stuff that makes the game feel really good, and really easy to connect with people who love the experience of flying." "We've also got all the complexity that older, more hardcore gamers expected." The people of the '90s, obviously. They came for the buttons, right? Luckily, it doesn't mean the game is just a glorified copy of the genre. Sure, the controls are basic, but they're in a good way that's intuitive, and refreshing

Universe DLC (formerly known as) Welcome, lazy nerd wankers! It's Ninja Turdle, the sarcastic and "finicky" personal tech blog that you probably don't read. This is the LCS tier of the site, for those of you who either love me, don't love me, or just get the occasional dork out of my system. Now, I am not happy to announce anything but the most exciting things on the interwebs should be shared with the whole world, since it'll turn into the work of art that it is.3 months ago, I authored an article with the subject line, "Pops up: Coronavirus" detailing a fake, jovial news report from an online article named "Who's Afraid of the Red Millenium?" that had a low-budget video created a few days beforehand as its equivalent of an "imaginary president" DLC. However, the said DLC, Coronavirus, wasn't even released!and stood purely in the realm of the internet, nerdy glory. Coronavirus is now the launch of the third and final expansion to my super-huge "big sim crossover" mod, Ninjadoodle, taking place around the globe from Norway to the United States, with mode changes, new sprites, weather effects, and a whole lot of other crazy stuff! Without further ado, let's get on with the list.My gift to

We rely on our body for sleep, rest, peace, happiness, nourishment, variety, stationery and cleaner rugs. Don't go out at night. Oh and if you do, go slow and a little bit early, that way everyone can enjoy life."Local government (Wellington, New Zealand)The news began at 3:00 PM, "You know what they say about the days of good taste breaking out in NYC. Of course, we only want you to stay home if you feel ill, but a few extra guidelines might just go a long way. Take precautions, make sure your face is always covered, wish your quarantine on others, and don't come or go until your time is up. Okay, lunchtime now, have a cup of hot tea."Kings

In the northlands, the land of wild magic, the Druids have an uneasy alliance with the humans. As their lands fall prey to the depredations of orc armies, a vicious bear-like creature threatens to claim all. The hero does not learn or get stronger. It is up to you to decide whether the land is better off with a civil war or an alliance between the Druid ways and the growing human empires. Your decisions determine the fate of an ancient land. This is a creative narrative driven boardgame. The narrative is triggered by the conflict between the two factions and the hero, which the player creates. Players are given the opportunity to develop their character without tactical battles being triggered. Because players are able to choose what their character is capable of doing, they will enjoy a rich tactical experience – even in a turn based game. Your decisions are presented through both narration and elegant visual design. Choose between your hero's ability to ally with the humans to create an alliance, or rebuff all the advances of the humans and instead ally with the Druids. A Druid's Duel is a strategic and interactive game with an interactive narrative. It uses traditional card-turn based gameplay but with a more narrative driven core. A Druid's Duel is not just about play, but also about story. The game is both the story of a single conflict and the resolve of the war. A Druid's Duel is a unique game that never gets old. Because it is a story driven experience, it will never lose its charm. A Druid's Duel is written by Danish game developer Johannes Poulsen, known for Spelreject and Poulsen Games.
