Parvovirus B19 is a human pathogenic parvovirus with life-threatening effects in immunocompromised patients. B19 consists of a single strand of approximately 5.2 kb genome and encodes for 2 proteins, VP1 and VP2. The localisation of the B19 genome in the infected cell is a prerequisite for the understanding of the virus entry and replication mechanism. In the present study, the localisation of the B19 genome was investigated in parvovirus-infected cells. The positive-sense B19 genome was always associated with the nucleus of the infected cells.
