US President Donald Trump, Egyptian President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, White House chief economic advisor Gary Cohn and China's President Xi Jinping (L) welcome US prisoners of war captured in the Korean War. Photo: AP Photo/Mike Segar A brief summary of the substance of the G20 gathering here in Hamburg If the past is any guide to the future, the three-day G20 meeting of world leaders here in Hamburg will be tense and contentious. And, if the rhetoric of President Donald Trump's recent tweets is any guide, the summit could erupt into a trade war. But, if anyone is moderating Trump on trade, it is Chinese President Xi Jinping, who will be well aware that a confrontation over trade could jeopardize a diplomatic breakthrough on North Korea. On the brink of the G20, a dramatic twist in a diplomatic spat between the US and Canada has soured the atmosphere. The US has accused Canada of engaging in illegal "dumping" by selling aluminum at unfair prices. But the G20 couldn't hold a meeting without also hashing out the so-called "U.S.-China trade spat." After months of trade tensions between the world's two largest economies, the G20 reaffirmed its commitment to building on its commitments to industrialize to mitigate climate change. The summit will be the first major international gathering since the US imposed tariffs on aluminum and steel imports from the EU, Canada and Mexico. The United States imposes a 25 percent tariff on imported steel and a 10 percent tariff on imported aluminum. The EU, Canada and Mexico all have retaliated by slapping a 25 percent tariff on American exports. Trump
