07/23/2018 2 minutes to read In this article This topic is the second in a four-part series about Microsoft SQL Server. Although the Select statement has been in SQL for a long time, SQL Server has some limitations around what can be done with it. The most significant limitation is that a SELECT statement can only return a single result. If you need to return more than one result, you should use a sub-query. In this case, the sub-query must be a valid Select statement, not just a comma separated list of results. SELECT * FROM dbo.Table WHERE DATE >= '2018-07-23' This query selects all records where the DATE column is greater than or equal to '2018-07-23'. Note that because the sub-query is a WHERE clause, it can only filter some of the rows of the parent query. This query will return one result, but the parent query will return multiple results. SELECT * FROM dbo.Table WHERE DATE >= '2018-07-23' This second query would return two results, one where the DATE column is greater than or equal to '2018-07-23', and one where the DATE column is less than '2018-07-23'. SELECT * FROM dbo.Table WHERE DATE >= '2018-07-23' ORDER BY DATE This query will return rows where the DATE column is greater than or equal to '2018-07-23', and order the results c6a93da74d
