after converting my wordstar files into a word file, i opened it and used the menu in word to insert a table of contents (toc). i then saved the file, renamed it, and put it back into the wordstar document. the conversion works great, but i cannot get the conversion to retain the original toc. is there a way to keep the original toc? microsoft's wordstar is the most popular word processor on the macintosh and windows. wordstar is designed to do the same job as word, wordperfect and wordperfect writer on the macintosh and microsoft word on windows. the main difference between wordstar and the rest of the word processors is that it has an easy to use interface. wordstar is aimed at people who do not want to spend a lot of time learning about word processing and who do not want to spend too much time doing things like finding an alternative word processor that is more powerful. wordstar is designed to let you do what you want to do in the minimum time and with the minimum effort. you can do simple things like adding bullets to your text and creating bulleted lists, or you can do complicated things like creating forms, creating tables and creating or customising your own templates. just like word 97/2000, the latest version of word also needs access to the windows api. however, unlike the older version, which only included activex controls, the latest version is also compatible with internet explorer 8 and 9. i have found for the most part, the newer versions of office and word are far better than the older versions. i have not used the older versions in some time and have no idea how the newer versions compare.
